The problem

Within the food industry, the biggest lever to tackle the multitude of environmental impacts is moving towards a fully plant-based diet, or at least vegetarian or flexitarian diet. As taste is one of the main barriers to consumer adoption of alternative proteins, we need solutions that can win the love of meat lovers.

8 Gt CO₂e

could be saved annually if everyone changed to a plant-based diet

26%

of global emissions comes from the food sector

"We were impressed with the rigorous impact screening process AENU had. We know we have a passionate investor dedicated to impact as much as we are with AENU."

AENU's impact

AENU has supported Next Gen Foods' German market entry via numerous client introductions since they launched in Germany in June 2022. AENU has also supported their global team expansion with talent referrals and helped increase their European branding by inviting them to speak at industry events around Europe.

"We invested in Next Gen Foods because we believe in their asset-light blitzscaling business model and product portfolio approach. We believe in Timo's and Andre's invaluable experience with LikeMeat and Impossible, in the critical production and operational partnerships they have been able to secure since day one, and in the all-star impact-minded team they have built. While all VCs are running away from the red ocean of plant-based products, we see Next Gen Foods as the only credible alternative to Beyond Meat and Impossible Foods that will bring confidence back to the segment. Also, Tindle is delicious!"
